We are working on developing a mobile fitness app, initially more narrowly focused on daily calorie tracking. We plan on adding additional features in further iterations.

The product would be very useful to anyone that cares about their own personal health and well being, as well as individuals that are dieting or attempting to maintain a certain weight or gain weight. These individuals will use the output of the project to track their own individual habits and reflect on what they can improve going forward.

Resources needed to complete the project include multiple programmers and testers for the app as well as computers and mobile devices to aid in its construction.
